IN MEMORIAM
In loving memory of Mrs. J. R. Conner, who departed this life one year ago, April 26, 1949

One year has passed, dear friend;
Since God has called you home.
To be with Him in heaven
Around the snow-white throne.

I miss you, oh, I miss you,
How could I help but cry;
But if I live and you lived,
I'll meet you by and by.
I—da Paulette.

Vet Amputee Kills Self After Trapped Under Wrecked Car

DANVILLE, VA.—Andrew Louis Blasko, World War II amputee, whose conscience hurt him, resolved all his problems as he lay pinned beneath the wreckage of his automobile. He shot himself through the head with a pistol.

But before he committed the act in the presence of horrified bystanders, Blasko cried out that he wanted to clear a World War II buddy whom he said he had implicated in military offenses while the two were in Germany.

Brandishing the pistol, Blasko had held off the crowd who sought to move the wrecked car off his artificial legs. He called for a newspaperman to take his "confession."

John Tate, Danville Bee photographer, complied.

Tate scribbled as Blasko told of how he had testified that a sergeant buddy had flogged German prisoners, stole a jeep load of cognac and then ran out on their platoon when 13 of them were captured.

"I want to clear him before I kill myself," Blasko said.

Tate passed the paper to the man and the latter scribbled his name.

The photographer then tried to get Blasko to agree to the moving of the car from his legs, but the response was: "They're artificial anyway—don't hurt at all."

Then he said, "Well, one-two three—" and fired and slumped over.

The buddy about whom Blasko talked, said later that the "poor fellow was lying," that nothing of what he told had ever occurred.

Professor Thinks Perfumed Lures to Be Best for Fish

NORMAN, OKLA. — Women long have been told that perfume can help them hook their men. Now comes a college professor who believes fish will go heavily for a scented lure.

Ralph Blanfang, professor of pharmacy at the University of Oklahoma, has produced a kit that he calls the "finny dinner" which contains nine chemically-treated lures.

Each of the lures gives off a different aroma. These perfumed lures are the result of two years of research.

A Los Angeles company is testing the kit for commercial fishing in the Pacific.

Milk Concentrates In Frozen Form May Be Boon to Mankind

CHICAGO, Ill. — Frozen milk concentrate may be available to retail customers within two years, according to John M. Fox, president of a large dairy corporation.

Fox said that many companies, encouraged by the boom in frozen orange juice ice, were working on methods of putting milk concentrate in the familiar six-ounce cans. The concentrate would be cheaper than fluid milk, he added.

Although still facing some serious laboratory difficulties, milk concentrate is in about the same position as frozen orange juice concentrate was in 1944, and the industry has much more technical knowledge to apply to existing problems, Fox said.

Fox said that milk concentrate was the industry's "most exciting" potential product because of the possibilities of cost reduction in dairy commodities. One of the economies, he explained, would be in handling milk at the time of surplus production.

Similar in some respects to that used in orange juice, the milk concentration process involves taking the water out at low temperatures in a high vacuum, he said.

"It does present some serious technical problems," he added. "The proteins in milk are a new element to work with. So far no one has solved the complete stabilization of the end product so that it will keep well in storage."

Another frozen food firm executive said that in the future housewives would be able to keep a month's supply of milk in the refrigerator in six ounce cans. The six ounce can will make a pint and one-half (24 ounces) of whole milk when water is added, he reported. He said that about half a dozen firms currently were working to perfect the process.

Pauper Princess Clings to Dream Of Touring U. S.

WEISBADEN, GERMANY. — A penniless German princess, daughter-in-law of Germany's last kaiser, lives in a trailer and makes a meager living by painting pictures.

Princess Alexandria Victoria is so broke that she even has trouble getting enough coal for the tiny stove in her cluttered trailer. She has a goading ambition—to tour the United States in her trailer—"just like I did when I was young."

She points out that her dream can be realized just as soon as "I earn enough money."

Although the daughter of a duke and the wife (divorced) of a royal prince, Alexandria has lived an independent, most unroyal life since World War I. She concedes her Bohemian ways have shocked her royal relatives.

"That's one reason I want to go back to America," she says. "There one can do what one likes. Here people are always shocked."

The princess was born in a castle in the north German state of Schleswig Holstein. She is the daughter of Duke Friedrich Ferdinand of Schleswig Holstein-Gluecksburg.

Married Prince August

In 1908 she married the late Prince August Wilhelm of Prussia, fourth son of Kaiser Wilhelm II. They had one son, Prince Alexander Ferdinand of Prussia, but their marriage ended in divorce in 1920. Her second marriage, to former naval Commander Arnold Ruemann, also ended in divorce a few years later.

"Since then," she said, "I have earned virtually all my own way."

Her hobby was painting. So she turned professional turning out pictures by the dozens, both portraits and landscapes. She even sold them herself.

In 1926 she went to the United States and toured most of the 48 states in a trailer, making her way from town to town painting pictures and selling them.

In 1932 she returned to Germany and when the war came, she was living in Berlin. She fled that city during its aerial bombardment, and moved her precious paintings to what she thought was safety in the rural home of a brother.

Lost Everything

She didn't move them far enough. The Russians occupied that area.

"And I lost everything," she lamented. "Even my little bank account in Berlin is still blocked so I've had to start all over again."

The princess has lived constantly in her small trailer the last two years, moving from one free parking site to another.

The trailer is only 15 feet long and heated by a tiny stove—when she can afford fuel. She does her own cooking on a little gas burner.

It's a bit crowded, with her easel always taking up one end of the trailer and her beloved dog, Falk, sharing the quarters.

But she is still cheerful and making plans for the future.

"I've been just as broke in America," she said. "I've seen the times there when I lived on hot dogs. I'll get back to America yet. All I need is to earn enough money."

New Device May Aid Deaf To Hear Through Fingers

NEW YORK.—A device which its designers believe will enable the deaf to "hear through their fingers" has been described by Prof. Norbert Wiener of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Prof. Wiener, one of the World's most noted mathematicians, said the device, when perfected to the portable stage, is expected to take the form of a glove to be worn on the left hand.

Each finger will receive a different set of vibrations, or frequency bands, tuned to receive the sounds in the range of the human voice, which the deaf person will learn to translate into meaningful patterns.

The vibrations received by the fingertips will take the place of the vibrations created by sound frequencies inside the ear.

years of age between them. It is opcrude stage of development, Wiener reported, already has been tested successfully on a number of normal persons whose ears had been stopped up, and on one blind deaf mute.

Jap Emperor No Genius In Poetry-Writing Field

TOKYO.—Emperor Hirohito may have held the awed worship of the Japanese as a ruler, but he isn't held as any great shakes in the poetry business.

Recently he burst into poetry about something he likes—a habit with him. This time the poem honored a Japanese scientist who had won the Nobel prize for physics.

Translated into English, the poem seemed to lose something, for here's what it said:

"I certainly regard the honors of Dr. Yukawa, who received the award, as the pride of our Japan."

One Japanese critic said—not for publication, of course—that even in Japanese, it wasn't much of a poem.

Letters to The Editor

Appomattox, Va.,
Open Letter To The County:
Dear Friends:

The other day I was adding up the yearly totals of our homemaking activities, getting ready for our Nation-wide Home Demonstration Week, April 30 to May 6. I was feeling real proud over our increase in membership, our successful handling of the many home making projects and the increase in the number of vigorous community programs.

Suddenly, I realized that you were the ones who should be proud, that it was my place to be grateful, grateful for your support, for the opportunity to work with you.

What Appomattox County has done has been possible because everybody helped. I do not mean just the home demonstration club leaders or members, but everybody, including grandma who took care of her small grandchild one afternoon and the small boy who played happily with grandma while his mother was away.

From the Courthouse to the last house on the new road, you all have helped to make our county a better place to live.

I am proud of what you have done, but am even prouder of the chance to know you and work with you.

Sincerely,
Ella S. Anderson,
Home Demonstration Agent.

Tangent, Oregon,
Editor, Times-Virginian,

It makes me so proud and a wee bit homesick to hear Appomattox is getting on the map with the big McLean House Dedication. A few weeks ago we were sitting at home listening to the radio one evening when we heard about Lee meeting Grant again at Appomattox. It was a part of a news broadcast from Portland, Oregon station. Even all the way across the country we're hearing about the big event there. Sorry I can't be there for it.

Virginia Christian Koos.

Appomattox, Va., April 18
Editor, Times-Virginian,
Dear Sir,

I want to commend you and your co-workers for the splendid program you presented at the McLean House Dedication ceremonies. Every phase of the event denoted the time and effort you put forth with the welfare of the public at heart. The First Aid, Rest Rooms, Lunch counters, and reserved seats were appreciated and truly showed how thoughtful you were of every detail.

I'm sure every citizen of our county and all visitors wish to join me in expressing thanks for that wonderful day you made possible.

I regret there was one fault which, of course, the committee was not responsible for. It was one of those things, that are planned for good and when put in the wrong hands lead to the opposite result. I do not know or care where the blame lies, in the issueing of reserved seat tickets; however, I do know I have never witnessed such rude, selfish conduct as was displayed by some of those feeling so-called honored with a reserved seat. After having the best positions there were to view everything, some even stood upon their seats, disregarding others behind them. There were many young couples having a seat to themselves while outside the rope, stood the ones that should have had the honor of a reserved seat.

Now, perhaps you will feel I am making this complaint because I stood outside the rope; however, I want you to understand I was privileged to have 2 reserved seats, but I did not reserve them for long— It was a sense of shame that overwhelmed me as I noted those sitting around me and there outside the ropes stood the ones that should have been been seated. I took my stand outside and gave my seats to two old ladies.

I trust this complaint will not cast any reflection on the part of those whose work will long be remembered and appreciated.

Yours truly,
Mrs. T. C. Harvey, Sr.

Spout Spring, Va.,
April 18, 1950.
Editor, Times-Virginian,

April 16, 1950 is a date long to be remembered by all who attended the dedication of the McLean House. Appomattox is to be congratulated on the wonderful way in which every detail was carried out. The day was perfect and the committee in charge was fortunate in getting the speakers and others who took part.

It seems right that memories of eighty-five years ago should be brought to Appomattox. This dedication should be an inspiration for Appomattox to continue to carry high the torch of honor and truth that others may know she is a living monument that stands for the noblest things.

Congratulations!
Spout Spring Reader.

Mr. Calvin Robinson, Editor,
Appomattox Times-Virginian,
Appomattox, Virginia
Dear Mr. Robinson:

Last Sunday I had the distinct pleasure of attending the dedication of the restored McLean House at Old Appomattox. I am so pleased that this historic spot is becoming more important with the passing years.

Very truly yours,
James R. Braden,
Assistant County Superintendent,
Washington County (Penn.) Public Schools.

BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION
(Omitted last week)

Mrs. Jean L. DeWall, Mrs. Hannah L. Bailey and son, Bill, of Pittsburgh, Pa., and Bill Hamill, of New Castle, Pa., and Mr. and Mrs. James H. Robertson and sons, James, Blake and Andy, of Williamsburg, spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. J. Berkley Drinkard, who celebrated their joint birthdays Sunday, April 16. Others attending the birthday party were Mr. and Mrs. Carlton D. Wayne and daughter, Sarah Iva, of Pamplin; Mr. and Mrs. Jack Derbin, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Martin and sons, Sam and Charles, and J. Berkley Drinkard, Jr., all of Lynchburg, and Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Drinkard, II, and Shafter Drinkard, of Appomattox. They attended the Dedication of the McLean House in the afternoon.
